I bring 25 years of finance and insurance expertise—the exact foundation this role needs. My background spans fund accounting, regulatory reporting, and operational delivery across complex asset servicing environments. I understand both the technical precision required in PE fund administration and the stakeholder coordination that makes it work.

I've spent the last decade designing and delivering finance transformation programs where accuracy, process discipline, and client-facing excellence were non-negotiable. At my core, I solve problems at the intersection of accounting rigor, operational complexity, and regulatory constraint—precisely what fund accounting demands. I'm comfortable moving between technical spreadsheet work and high-level reporting discussions with limited supervision.

My experience isn't directly in PE fund accounting, but it's built on transferable strengths: I've redesigned closing processes for multi-entity structures, managed SLA-driven delivery to external stakeholders, and trained teams on new accounting frameworks and systems. I've also worked across geographies and coordinated with international service providers—the servicing model Citco operates resonates with how I work.

What interests me here is the chance to apply my operational discipline and finance depth to a sector where both matter intensely. Citco's scale, client roster, and emphasis on team quality suggest a place where technical competence is genuinely valued. I'm drawn to the combination of hands-on accounting work and exposure to fund finance strategy.

I understand this is likely a hire where CDI stability matters more than contractor flexibility. I'm genuinely open to the right permanent role in London, especially one offering real learning in an asset class I don't yet know deeply but am motivated to master.

I'd welcome a conversation about how to bridge my experience into fund accounting at the right pace.
