Re : Director

Leading a private equity fund accounting team in Luxembourg means owning the reporting cycle end to end while sitting on boards, managing escalations, and still finding time for business development. That combination of technical depth and full delivery ownership is what makes this Director role different from a pure technical seat.

I've built and rebuilt fund accounting and investment accounting functions under regulatory pressure. At CNP, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints for a 350 billion euro book, delivering in 18 months and on time, with the reconciliations and controls that hold up under audit and regulatory review. That's the same discipline this role needs for IFRS and GAAP financial statements across a private equity portfolio: accurate, timely, defensible. I've also led SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics implementations from design to production, work that requires the same stakeholder alignment across Finance, Operations and IT that a board-facing Director role demands, plus the migration and data cleanup experience (interface bascule, suspens apurement, UAT) that matters when onboarding new clients into an operational process. Hybrid work is standard for me: my last engagement at Clearwater ran on distributed teams and remote delivery tools without any loss of rigor.

I haven't run a fund accounting team specifically in a private equity fund services platform, though the technical and governance overlap is direct.

Happy to walk through specifics on a call if that's useful.
