I bring 25 years of finance and insurance transformation experience—exactly the operational depth KPMG's Asset Management clients need. My background sits at the intersection of complex regulatory environments, large-scale program delivery, and C-suite alignment: the same pressure points your transformation projects face.

Most recently, I led a €50M finance operating model redesign for a major insurance group, restructuring reporting workflows, control frameworks, and technology roadmaps across 200+ stakeholders. I've spent the last decade designing solutions where compliance constraints, technical complexity, and business urgency collide—which translates directly to the regulatory and operational realities of alternative investment transformation.

What I add specifically: I don't just advise; I've delivered PMO governance, managed interdisciplinary teams through resistance and ambiguity, and translated CFO priorities into executable programs. I understand how asset managers and service providers actually operate—their cost pressures, their technology debt, their regulatory exposure—because I've sat inside their finance functions.

I work as a senior independent consultant now, which gives me flexibility and a track record of embedded delivery. That said, I'm genuinely interested in joining a firm where I can build longer-term client relationships and help shape transformation strategy at scale. KPMG's investment in alternative assets and your focus on tech-enabled change aligns exactly with where I want to anchor my next phase.

I'd welcome a conversation about how to translate this experience into impact for your clients. I'm based in the Paris region and comfortable with regular Luxembourg presence.
