Re : PMO senior (m/f/d)

A large-scale transformation programme across a financial market infrastructure organisation needs governance that holds under pressure: aligned stakeholders, a clear risk log, and reporting senior leadership can act on without translation. That's the terrain where I've spent most of my career.

At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting: €350bn in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months. That kind of delivery depends on the same governance discipline this role asks for: steering committees that actually decide things, dependencies tracked before they become blockers, and status reports that tell leadership what changed and why.

As senior programme director at Clearwater, I ran several parallel implementations of an R to R SaaS solution, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones, and resources on a dedicated tool (Monday.com), for clients including Luxempart. At Coface, IFRS 9 rolled out in stages over four years: successive POCs, ECL methodology, accounting schemes, UAT, coordination with the custodian CACEIS. Four years running that kind of multi-workstream rollout taught me where governance breaks down first: unclear ownership of decisions, not lack of process.

A market infrastructure organisation at this scale is exactly where that experience applies directly, with the added weight of regulatory visibility and executive-level stakeholder management.

I operate as an independent consultant today. That said, a permanent role in Paris is entirely something I'd consider, either directly or after an initial engagement period, given the scope and visibility of this programme.

I would be happy to discuss how this governance approach would apply to your current workstreams.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
