I've spent 25 years building and scaling finance operations in insurance and banking—exactly the environment where SimCorp's clients live. This role matters because it sits at the intersection of technical depth, operational delivery, and regulatory complexity. That's where I add most value.

My background is building high-performing teams that own outcomes, not just features. At AXA, I led the redesign of a €2B regulatory reporting platform—rebuilt governance, aligned 40+ stakeholders across Finance, Actuariat, and IT, and delivered on a fixed timeline. More recently, I've spent three years as interim Finance Manager across multiple insurance firms, designing processes that survive handoff and scaling operations that people actually want to work in. I'm comfortable in the CFO office. I speak both code and compliance.

What matters here: SimCorp is moving from software vendor to services business. That shift requires someone who understands how to operationalize delivery at scale without losing quality. You need a Head who can staff the IAS Value Team intelligently, build the connective tissue between delivery and client success, and make the hard calls when process battles outcome. I've done that work. I know what it costs.

One honest note: I'm currently independent. I work in short-term interim roles by choice—it keeps me sharp and lets me take on problems other people won't. If you're looking for someone who'll commit to a multi-year CDI, I'd be transparent about whether this is the right fit. But if you want someone who can launch this team fast, stabilize delivery, and build a culture people stay in, let's talk.
