I bring 25 years of financial services delivery with a proven track record managing complex business change programmes. What distinguishes my candidacy: I've spent my entire career solving the exact problem your client faces—translating strategic intent into disciplined, on-time delivery across resistant stakeholder groups. I work comfortably across Finance, Actuariat, IT, and Operations simultaneously, which is precisely where programme complexity lives.

In my recent role as interim PMO lead for a major European insurer's regulatory reporting transformation, I managed end-to-end delivery of a €3M, 18-month programme touching 12 departments. I implemented a tailored governance model (hybrid Agile-Waterfall), maintained weekly executive dashboards, and brought the project in on budget despite a mid-cycle regulatory scope change. I mentored three junior project coordinators who stayed engaged and contributed measurably to closure.

Before that, I led the operating model redesign for a global reinsurance division—again, cross-functional chaos, strong stakeholders, real pressure. What worked then will work here: clear governance, no surprises in reporting, ruthless focus on dependencies, and the discipline to say "no" early rather than slip quietly.

I'm fully aligned with what you're asking for. I'm calm under pressure. I stay current with methodology shifts. I'm genuinely collaborative—the kind of person who makes junior team members better, not smaller.

One honest note: I've built my career as an interim consultant. I deliver project outcomes with absolute commitment, but I've chosen flexibility over permanent roles. If your client's structure requires someone in situ long-term, let's be clear about that early. If they value an experienced operator who de-risks delivery and builds capability while doing it, I'm the fit.

I'm available to discuss immediately.
