Dear Arch Europe Insurance Services,

I'm writing to apply for the PMO & Value Management Lead role. With 25 years in insurance and finance, I've spent the last decade running PMO delivery and portfolio governance for large-scale transformation programmes—exactly what you're building here.

What I bring: I've led PMO functions through complex regulatory and operating model changes at major insurers, managing small PMO teams while simultaneously owning programme-level reporting, controls, and value tracking. I understand the tension you're solving—how to run disciplined delivery governance (the 50% programme PMO work) while ensuring the portfolio actually delivers measurable value against business cases and OKRs (the other 50%). That balance between hands-on PMO support and strategic portfolio oversight is where I've added most value.

Concrete example: At a London-based insurer, I built a portfolio reporting and benefits realisation function for a three-year transformation, covering 12 concurrent programmes with £40M+ annual investment. I line-managed two portfolio analysts, owned the cost and benefits tracking, and reported monthly to the CFO and transformation leadership. We caught two programmes early where projected benefits had drifted from baseline, reset expectations, and recovered £8M in planned benefits realisation. The PMO governance discipline—reporting cadence, gate controls, dependency mapping—kept delivery on track when scope pressure was high.

One honest point: I've worked as a freelance consultant for the last five years rather than in a permanent role. For a position like this—where continuity, team building, and long-term strategy matter—I'm actively looking to move into a full-time structure. Arch's focus on collaboration and enabling progress is exactly why this role interests me.

I'm based in France but London-ready. Happy to discuss how my experience maps to your specific transformation priorities and team needs.

Best regards,
Xavier Robitaille
