Re : Finance Change Consultant (Financial Reporting) 12m FTC

Standardising financial reporting across a business that's just rebranded from RSA to Intact Insurance, while migrating ERP and data solutions and rebuilding the monthly close, is not a small technical brief. It's the kind of programme where finance readiness and system design have to move together, or the close breaks.

That's the work I've spent the last part of my career doing. At CNP, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints, on 350bn EUR of assets, delivering in 18 months and on schedule, with the sub-ledger and accounting schemes redesigned from the ground up. On SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater implementations, I've gone from functional and data requirements through to UAT, catching the gaps that only surface once real transaction volumes hit the system, not in workshop slides. I've also run data migration and account clean-up work directly tied to ERP interface cut-overs, which maps closely to the data migration approach this role needs. Across all of it, the constant has been stakeholder management: getting Finance, IT, and Actuarial to agree on one process design instead of three.

I haven't worked inside Intact's own P&L or cost base reporting specifically, so that context I'd need to pick up fast rather than bring in on day one.

Hybrid delivery and remote collaboration are standard practice for me, most recently on Clearwater work run largely off-site with UK-based teams. As a contractor who is a non-UK Tax resident, based overseas, IR35 does not apply to me.

Happy to walk through the ERP migration work in more detail on a call.
