Dear Hiring Manager,

I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience directly into your transformation missions. Unlike generalist consultants, I've spent my entire career at the intersection of regulatory complexity, operational redesign, and delivery discipline—the exact terrain where financial services transformations either succeed or stall.

My value to EY's Technology Consulting team is specific. I deliver diagnostic clarity on operating models because I've rebuilt them myself. I translate regulation (FATCA, MIFID II, AML frameworks) into process and system requirements because I've managed compliance transformations end-to-end. I move organizations through change because I speak both finance and technology fluently, which means I can arbitrate between CFO offices and IT leadership without losing either side.

Two concrete examples: I led a process redesign and cost optimization for a €2B+ insurance entity, reducing operational drag by 18% while embedding new regulatory controls—delivered in 14 months with zero regulatory findings. On a second mission, I designed and piloted the operating model for a mid-size asset manager's control framework overhaul, aligning Métier functions, risk, and compliance. Both involved the same muscle EY needs: diagnostic rigor, stakeholder alignment under pressure, and clean execution.

I should be direct: I've operated as an independent consultant and interim manager since 2020. I'm genuinely interested in returning to a structured consulting environment where I can scale impact across multiple clients while building a team. That's the real pull for me here—not a career reset, but an evolution.

I'm fluent in English and French, based in the Paris region, and available to discuss how I fit your expansion plans. I'd welcome a conversation with your team.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
