I'm a senior transformation consultant with 25 years in insurance—every single day spent in this sector. I've led operating model redesigns, process automation programmes, and regulatory transformation initiatives across claims, underwriting, policy and back-office functions. This role maps directly to what I do best: untangling complex programmes where technical depth, stakeholder discipline, and delivery rigour matter.

Over the last eight years, I've managed large-scale transformations in insurance operations. One example: I redesigned the finance function for a mid-cap European insurer—rebuilt the closing process, implemented controls frameworks aligned with Solvency II reporting, and cut month-end cycle time by 40%. Another: led a cross-functional transformation across underwriting and claims for a multinational group, involving target operating model design, process mapping, and governance structure overhaul. Both required the same blend of skills this role demands: stakeholder alignment with C-suite, programme governance under pressure, and the ability to translate business outcomes into operational reality.

I work as an independent consultant—which means I'm accustomed to moving fast, adapting to new organisations quickly, and delivering without long onboarding curves. The hybrid Brussels setup works well for me. My one honest note: I've spent the last five years freelance. If NP Group wants to convert this into a permanent role after a testing period, we can discuss that path. But I'm ready to deliver day one as a Transformation Manager.

I'm fluent in English and French, and my network in the Brussels insurance and reinsurance market is solid.

Let's talk. I'm available for a call this week.
