I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise—the rare combination of deep technical knowledge, delivery discipline, and the ability to navigate competing stakeholder demands. I've built my career solving the exact problems that live at the intersection of finance, risk, and operations: regulatory pressure, system complexity, and execution urgency.

On my last two interim assignments, I restructured close processes that cut month-end reporting timelines by 40% and led a regulatory reporting transformation that reduced control exceptions by 65% across four business lines. These aren't incremental improvements—they're the kind of shifts that free capacity and lower operational risk simultaneously. I work the full stack: process design, control architecture, stakeholder alignment, delivery.

I'm structured as a consultant (Expert Zone Advisory SAS), which means I'm built for speed and flexibility. I also know the real constraint: you need someone who stays long enough to see change stick, not someone collecting billable hours. I'm comfortable with long-term interim roles where the work matters and the timeline is clear.

I'd like to understand the specific challenge you're facing—whether it's transformation, PMO, regulatory pressure, or restructuring a finance function. Let's talk about fit.
