Re : PMO Portfolio Lead

Delivering a portfolio of complex projects with consistent visibility on risk, financial performance and execution quality, while moving teams from reactive fixes to proactive governance, is exactly the kind of mandate that tests whether a PMO function actually works or just reports.

At CNP Assurances, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints, 350 billion euros in assets under management, delivered in 18 months, on time, with governance and controls designed to hold up under regulatory scrutiny. That work depended on the same discipline this role asks for: RAID tracking, financial monitoring, and clear reporting to leadership before problems became escalations. I've also led SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics implementations end to end, coordinating Finance, Actuarial, IT and Risk stakeholders who had no reporting line to me, which is the influence-without-authority dynamic central to this position. On migration programs, I built cahiers des charges, ran UAT, and cleared suspense accounts, tracking cost risk and value realization the whole way through.

I haven't led a fully distributed global portfolio across time zones; my program leadership has been within France-based insurance groups, though always across multi-stakeholder, multi-vendor delivery.

Worth a call to see if this maps to what you're building.
