Re : Deputy CFO

iBanFirst is creating this Deputy CFO role at a specific inflection point: moving from rapid growth to disciplined profitability at scale, while giving Arnaud de la Porte room to focus on broader executive work. That means someone who can run Controlling & Accounting, FP&A, Tax and Treasury as one function, not four separate lanes, across entities in Paris, Brussels and London.

In insurance investment accounting, I've built IFRS 9 ECL methodologies and asset categorization frameworks, and set up sub-ledger structures that feed statutory reporting, the kind of rigor auditors and regulators expect across consolidated entities. I've redesigned closing processes to cut cycle time and tighten reconciliations, work that maps directly onto month-end and year-end closing across multiple legal entities. On systems, I've led SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics implementations end to end, including data migration, UAT, and clearing legacy suspense accounts, exactly the kind of process and system work needed for finance to grow without losing accuracy. My PMP certification and history running complex, multi-stakeholder programs across Finance, Actuarial, IT and Risk should translate well to leading a team split across three offices.

My regulatory background sits in insurance (Solvency II, ACPR, ORSA), not payment institution regulation. The control logic is close, but the licensing framework is different.

Let's set up a call to walk through how this maps onto your Controlling & Accounting priorities.
