Dear Hiring Manager,

I bring 25 years of insurance and financial services expertise directly into your audit and advisory work. As an independent consultant, I've spent my entire career in this sector—from regulatory reporting and process design to CFO office delivery and financial transformation. That depth matters when you're auditing complex insurance operations.

Here's what moves the needle: I spent three years as interim Finance Manager for a major insurance group, where I redesigned their monthly closing cycle, cut compliance reporting timelines by 40%, and embedded control frameworks across Finance and Actuariat teams. I've also run multiple PMO assignments across insurance transformation programmes, managing stakeholder alignment between Finance, IT, Risk and Operations—the exact cross-functional complexity you'll encounter in your audit teams.

I know Deloitte's approach. You need consultants who can move fast, talk to C-suite and controllers alike, and translate technical audit findings into business action. I do that naturally because I've sat on both sides: as a customer under audit and as the person designing the processes being reviewed.

One honest note: I'm coming from 100% independent consulting. I'm looking at this role because the work excites me more than the freedom of freelancing right now, and I want the institutional resources and client scale Deloitte offers. That's a genuine shift, not a default move.

I'm available to discuss how my insurance delivery background fits your Insurance/Financial Services audit practice in Frankfurt. Let's talk.
