Re : Head of Financial Integration (Private Equity)

A newly acquired, PE backed Services business needs a finance integration playbook built from scratch, while keeping group reporting running through the first post-acquisition cycles. That combination, speed on the playbook and discipline on the day-to-day close, is where this role gets hard.

At SCOR, I spent four years in reinsurance, two of them as chief transformation officer of the investment function, aligning finance, risk and IT through a multi-year transformation. At Clearwater, as senior programme director, I ran several parallel implementations of a SaaS R to R solution, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones and resources on Monday.com, for clients including Luxempart. That mix of programme governance and investment accounting depth maps closely onto what a PMI lead needs here: a playbook that holds up across acquisitions, not just the first one.

On the operational side, I built the Coface investments Data Warehouse (fields, table structure, input and output controls) and rolled out IFRS 9 in stages over four years: successive POCs, the ECL methodology, accounting schemes, UAT, and coordination with CACEIS as custodian. That is the same discipline this role needs for month-end, year-end and audit ownership once the integration work is live.

I have also built a practice from zero: at Primexis, I created the insurance business unit from scratch, 20 people, 10 clients, 3 million euros in revenue, as a Comex member. A PMI function inside a PE backed, acquisitive group calls for the same kind of build.

I operate as an independent consultant today. That said, I am genuinely open to a permanent role in Paris, either directly or after an initial engagement period, given the scope and seniority of this position.

I would be happy to discuss how this playbook approach would apply to the group's first few integrations.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
