Re : Director - Accounting & Regulatory Policy

Lusona's mandate for this role is unusually direct: sit inside a global Accounting & Regulatory Policy function and form defensible positions on IFRS, US GAAP or Basel capital and liquidity questions where the rulebook runs out, then hold that line with senior stakeholders across Finance, Risk, Legal and Treasury. That is close to the work I have done for the last two decades in insurance and in finance, on the accounting side of exactly this divide.

At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting: €350bn in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months. That work sat at the interface between technical accounting and prudential reporting, which is the same interface this role covers on the accounting side. At Coface, IFRS 9 was rolled out in stages over four years: successive POCs, ECL methodology, accounting schemas, UAT, coordination with the depositary CACEIS. I also built the investment Data Warehouse there (field design, table structure, input and output controls), and led a team of 16 in technical accounting. At SCOR, I spent four years, two of them as chief transformation officer of the investment function, advising senior stakeholders on complex reporting and organisational questions, which is close to the internal advisory posture this role asks for. None of this was routine reporting: each mission required forming a position on ambiguous rules and defending it to people who did not necessarily want to hear it.

I have led teams of 10 to 15 on delivery programmes and a business unit of 20 at Primexis, so managing and developing a group the size of the Glasgow team is familiar ground. Hybrid working and distributed teams are how I have operated for years, most recently at Clearwater Analytics, where I ran parallel SaaS implementations with monthly steering committees at general management level across several countries.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period. As a contractor who is a non-UK Tax resident, based overseas, IR35 does not apply to me.

I would be happy to discuss how this accounting-side profile fits the Executive Director remit.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
