I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience—25 years in the same sector, no exceptions. I've spent that time at the intersection of technical depth, regulatory complexity, and delivery pressure. What I do best: take on interim finance leadership or PMO roles where the stakes are high, the constraints are real, and clarity matters more than politics.

Over the last decade, I've led two major transformations that illustrate this. At Generali, I redesigned the closing process for a €50B+ portfolio—cut the cycle from 12 days to 6, reduced control exceptions by 70%, and embedded the new operating model across three business units. More recently, I managed a regulatory reporting overhaul that consolidated fragmented data sources across five legacy systems into a single validated pipeline; the work held through a full regulatory audit with zero findings. Both required the same thing: understanding what regulators actually need, building processes that didn't need constant firefighting, and keeping five different stakeholder groups aligned without burning out the team.

I work best on defined interim mandates—6 to 24 months—where ownership is clear and the outcome is measurable. I'm not looking for a forever home. I prefer CDI candidates for those roles, and I know that. If this is a medium-term assignment with real scope, I'm the move.

Let's talk specifics. My calendar is open.
