Re : Senior Project Manager

Fruition Group's client needs someone who can run large-scale technology transformation programmes end to end, with the governance discipline and stakeholder reach that senior executives expect. That combination, delivery rigor plus board-level presence, is where I've spent the last decade.

At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting: €350bn in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months. That kind of programme lives or dies on RAID management, milestone control and keeping IT, finance and actuarial functions pointed at the same deliverable, exactly the governance discipline this role calls for.

More recently, as senior programme director at Clearwater, I ran several parallel implementations of an R to R SaaS solution, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones and resources on Monday.com. One of these engagements was for Luxempart, a Luxembourg-based client, managed fully hybrid: senior stakeholder reporting, cross-team coordination and delivery control all handled remotely, which is now simply how I work day to day.

Before that, at Coface, I rolled out IFRS 9 in stages over four years: successive POCs, ECL methodology, accounting schemes, UAT, and coordination with the depositary CACEIS, alongside building an investment Data Warehouse (fields, table structure, input and output controls). Multi-year programme delivery with dispersed technical and business stakeholders is not new territory for me.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to the transformation programmes Fruition Group's client is running.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
