Re : Senior Finance Manager

Building a finance function that can scale for a mission-driven organization, while keeping the accounting and reporting solid enough for auditors and investors alike, is exactly the kind of mandate I want to take on, and the energy transition focus makes it more so.

At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting: €350bn in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months. That work demanded the same discipline this role calls for: accurate records, tight controls, and numbers leadership can act on without checking twice.

At Coface, I rolled out IFRS 9 in stages over four years: successive POCs, the ECL methodology, accounting schemes, UAT, and coordination with the depositary, CACEIS. I also built the investment Data Warehouse, defining the fields, table structure, and input and output controls. That kind of coordination with external partners translates directly to working with external advisors on German tax and payroll compliance.

More recently, as senior programme director at Clearwater, I ran several parallel implementations of an SaaS R2R solution, with monthly sponsor committees at senior leadership level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones, and resources on a dedicated tool, Monday.com. That programme was fully remote, and it is how I have worked for years: comfortable owning a finance function, driving vendors and stakeholders, and reporting to leadership without anyone in the room.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to building the finance function here.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
