Re : PMO Portfolio Lead

Portfolio delivery at scale, across distributed teams, with governance that actually holds when a project starts slipping. That's the specific problem this role is built to solve, and it's the kind of environment where I do my best work.

Governance and delivery assurance have been the core of my work at Clearwater, where I acted as senior programme director. I ran several parallel implementations of a R to R SaaS solution, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones, and resources on Monday.com. That included Luxempart in Luxembourg, where the same discipline in reporting and escalation applied to a client-facing, high-visibility rollout. Portfolio health monitoring, RAID management, and financial tracking (revenue, margins, forecasting) were not separate workstreams. They were the same conversation with sponsors, every month, backed by the same data.

Before that, at SCOR, I spent 4 years in the group, 2 of them as chief transformation officer of the investment function, aligning finance, actuarial, and IT stakeholders around a common delivery standard without holding formal authority over any of them. That's the same muscle this role needs: influence through clarity and data, not through hierarchy.

At Primexis, I built the insurance business unit from scratch: 20 people, 10 clients, €3M in revenue, and a seat on the executive committee. Selecting, onboarding, and enabling project managers within a delivery team is not new territory for me. I've built the team and run the governance around it.

I hold a PMP certification (PMI, 2025), and I automate most of my operational work today through AI agents under Claude and GPT, certified in Generative AI Primer (Vanderbilt, 2026) and GenAI for Account Executives (Yale, 2026).

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to the portfolio you're building.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
