Re : Program Project Manager

This programme sits at the intersection of governance discipline and vendor coordination, with a specialist partner owning technical delivery while the business side owns operating model, RAID, and executive reporting. That split is exactly where I've spent the last several years.

At Clearwater, I acted as senior programme director, piloting several parallel implementations of a SaaS R to R solution, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones and resources on a dedicated tool (Monday.com). One of those engagements was for Luxempart, a Luxembourg-based client, run in hybrid mode with the same governance rigor as an on-site programme. At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting: €350bn in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months, coordinating finance, actuarial and IT stakeholders throughout. At Coface, I rolled out IFRS 9 in stages over four years: successive POCs, ECL methodology, accounting schemes, UAT, coordination with the custodian CACEIS, alongside building an investment Data Warehouse from the ground up (field definitions, table structure, input and output controls). Four years at SCOR, including two as chief transformation officer of the investment function, added the executive stakeholder exposure this role calls for: steering committees, CIO-level reporting, cross-functional alignment across Investment Management, Operations and Technology.

Investment Management transformation combines the regulatory weight of financial services with the coordination load of a multi-vendor programme. That combination is where I add the most value, and Realtime Recruitment's brief describes it precisely.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period. Hybrid working is standard practice for me, and I'm comfortable running governance and reporting remotely when needed, as I did throughout the Clearwater programmes.

I would be happy to discuss how this governance and vendor coordination experience applies to your Investment Management programme.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
