Re : Chief of Staff / Direction de la Transformation

A European insurance group growing fast and restructuring its operating model, central functions and entity integrations needs someone who can move between strategic structuring and execution without dropping either thread. That combination is the core of this Chief of Staff / Transformation office role.

Four years at SCOR included two as chief transformation officer of the investment function: prioritizing workstreams, scoping projects, and preparing materials for governance bodies that senior leadership used to decide. At Clearwater Analytics, as senior programme director, I ran several parallel SaaS R2R implementations, including for the Luxembourg-based Luxempart, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones and resources on a dedicated tool (Monday.com), the kind of matrix coordination this role demands across multiple entities. At Primexis, I built the insurance business unit from scratch to 20 people, 10 clients and €3m in revenue, and sat on the Comex, which gave me direct exposure to strategic decisions at the top of an organization. At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting: €350bn in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months, which shows the same discipline applied to large-scale delivery inside an insurance group.

A transformation office inside a group moving at this pace, working directly with senior leadership on operating model change, is where this combination of analysis, delivery and stakeholder management is most useful.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to the Group's current transformation priorities.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
