Re : Global Project Manager

A global transformation programme centred on data governance, run at charity scale but with the stakeholder complexity of a large regulated organisation: that combination is exactly where I've spent most of my career.

At Clearwater Analytics, I acted as senior programme director, running several parallel implementations of an R to R SaaS solution with monthly sponsor committees at senior management level, consolidating deliverables, milestones and resources on a dedicated tool (Monday.com). That work was fully remote, which is how I operate by default: distributed teams, structured reporting cadence, no loss of grip on scope or timeline.

Driving progress without direct authority is the recurring thread across my missions. At SCOR, I spent four years in the group, two of them as chief transformation officer of the investment function, aligning finance, actuarial and risk stakeholders who reported to different lines. At Coface, I rolled out IFRS 9 in stages over four years: successive proofs of concept, ECL methodology, accounting schemes, UAT, coordination with the depositary CACEIS, alongside building an investment Data Warehouse (fields, table structure, input and output controls). None of that moves without influence rather than hierarchy.

I also know what it takes to stand up a workstream from nothing. At Primexis, I built the Insurance business unit from scratch: 20 people, 10 clients, €3m in revenue, and a seat on the executive committee. That's the same discipline a 12-month FTC with a strong likelihood of becoming permanent needs from day one.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period. As a contractor who is a non-UK Tax resident, based overseas, IR35 does not apply to me.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to the data governance initiative.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
