Re : Senior Implementation Consultant (Hybrid/Remote)

Long-established software companies scaling their implementation practice need consultants who can own a client relationship end to end: discovery, solution design, configuration, go-live, without losing the thread across multiple parallel projects. That is the specific gap this role is built around, and it matches how I have worked for the last decade.

At Clearwater, I worked as senior programme director, piloting several parallel implementations of an R to R SaaS solution, with monthly sponsor committees at executive level and consolidated tracking of deliverables, milestones and resources on a dedicated tool (Monday.com). One of those clients was Luxempart, a Luxembourg-based holding company; managing that relationship meant translating business requirements into system configuration while keeping stakeholders across finance and IT aligned on scope and timeline. That work was fully remote and cross-border, which is close to the hybrid setup this role describes: distributed teams, structured cadence, no loss of ownership because the room isn't physical.

Before that, at CNP, I automated projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and Solvency II investment reporting: 350bn euros in assets, SimCorp Dimension from design to go-live, delivered in 18 months. That project required the same sequence this role asks for: requirements gathering with business and technical stakeholders, solution design, configuration, testing, and a deployment date that held. At Coface, IFRS 9 was rolled out in stages over four years: successive proofs of concept, ECL methodology, accounting schemas, UAT, and coordination with the custodian bank CACEIS. I also built the investment data warehouse there, defining fields, table structure, and input/output controls, which is the kind of data and integration work this role flags as a strong advantage.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to the client base MCS Group is recruiting for.

Best regards,
