Re : Program Manager with French

Xebia is asking someone to own global delivery for a key account across Poland, India, the Netherlands and France, while keeping the financial services depth that account needs and turning delivery into commercial growth. That combination, program governance plus domain credibility plus a commercial mindset, is the environment I want to work in.

At Clearwater Analytics, I acted as senior programme director, running several parallel SaaS implementations of a record-to-report solution at once, with monthly sponsor committees at general management level and a single Monday.com view consolidating deliverables, milestones and resources across clients, including Luxempart in Luxembourg. That is the same setup the role calls for: one team facing multiple stakeholders across regions, one tracking system, no surprises in governance.

The financial services depth comes from 25 years spent entirely in insurance and finance, all of it in the French market, working directly with French C-suite stakeholders. At SCOR, I spent four years in the group, two of them as chief transformation officer of the investment function. At CNP, I automated the projected financial production across asset classes (P&L, cash flows) and the Solvency II investment reporting for €350bn in assets, running the SimCorp Dimension implementation from design to go-live in 18 months. Both mandates meant balancing client priorities against internal delivery constraints, the same "one foot in the client, one foot in the firm" posture this role needs.

The commercial side is not new either. At Primexis, I built the insurance business unit from scratch to 20 people, 10 clients and €3m in revenue, sitting on the Comex. Growing one account across service lines is the same exercise at a different scale.

I operate as an independent consultant today. Nevertheless, I am perfectly open to a permanent role, directly or after an initial engagement period.

I would be happy to discuss how this experience applies to the Paris account.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
