Re : Strategic Project Lead (Remote)

Leading a strategic initiative that ties technology delivery to business outcomes across time zones is a specific kind of discipline: it needs someone who can translate boardroom priorities into a plan a global team can actually execute against, week by week.

That's the work I've done for 25 years in insurance and finance, mostly from the CFO side of technology and data transformation. At CNP, I rebuilt the investment accounting production line under Solvency II constraints: 350 billion euros in assets, 18 months, delivered on time, with cross-functional teams spanning actuarial, IT, and operations who didn't naturally speak the same language until the project forced them to. I've also run system implementations end to end, SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics, where the real work was risk mitigation: catching data migration gaps before they hit production, and adjusting the plan when KPIs showed a control was slipping rather than waiting for it to fail. Stakeholder management across senior leadership and operational teams isn't a side skill in that kind of project; it's the job.

Remote and hybrid work is how I've operated for years, including through my last engagement with Clearwater, coordinating deliverables with teams spread across multiple countries without losing pace or clarity.

Happy to walk through the CNP program or the Clearwater rollout in more detail if that's useful, on a short call.
