Your transformation agenda demands someone who can diagnose a complex operating model, design the fix, and then stay on the ground to make it stick. That's the work I've done for 25 years across insurance and finance—and it's exactly what this role requires.

I've led similar end-to-end transformations in regulated environments where process rigor and stakeholder alignment weren't nice-to-haves; they were the whole game. At a top-10 French insurance group, I redesigned their financial close across three entities—restructured workflows, embedded new controls, migrated systems, and handed over to BAU with 40% faster closing time and zero post-go-live compliance gaps. The work spanned Finance, Actuariat, Risk, and Ops. It required the same mix: structured problem-solving, execution discipline, and the credibility to push back on stakeholders when necessary.

More recently, I've worked as a senior interim consultant on PMO and transformation delivery—defining scope, sequencing workstreams, managing dependencies, reporting to C-suite. I understand how to think like a consultant (diagnosis, design, insight) and work like an operator (delivery, accountability, results). I'm energized by the complexity Alter Domus operates in—regulated, client-centric, cross-functional—and I thrive when given a mandate and the autonomy to execute it.

One honest note: I've spent the last decade as an independent consultant. I move fast, take ownership, and report clearly. If Alter Domus is looking for someone who can hit the ground running and needs CDI-level stability, I'm worth a conversation to understand whether the fit is mutual.

I'm interested in Vilnius and the scale of impact this role offers. Let's talk about what's on your agenda and whether my experience is what you need.
