Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm writing to express my interest in the Investment Officer position at AXA Wealth Europe.

Over 25 years in insurance and finance, I've spent most of my career in the operational and financial mechanics that keep asset management running—exactly what your Middle Office team needs. I've managed portfolio operations, fund administration, cash flow management, and the coordination between investment mandates and regulatory reporting. That's the core of what you're describing: daily fund management, NAV reconciliation, fee administration, and the transaction pipeline that connects client contracts to actual investments.

What matters here is not just knowing the processes, but understanding how they fail under pressure. I spent two years as interim Finance Manager at a mid-cap European insurer, leading the redesign of their fund management controls and closing procedures across 15+ investment vehicles. We reduced NAV reconciliation time by 40% and caught a structural fee calculation error that had been running for eight months. That kind of operational discipline—combining process design with attention to detail—is what keeps Middle Office effective as the business scales.

I should be direct about one thing: I've worked primarily as a senior consultant and interim manager on complex mandates, not in permanent finance operations roles. This CDD position is appealing precisely because it's a contained 6-month assignment where I can add focused value to a growing team. I'm not looking to move into permanent operations; I'm looking for the right tactical engagement where my experience can accelerate your team's maturity.

I'm based in the Paris region and comfortable working on-site in Luxembourg. I'd welcome a brief conversation about how the fund portfolio has evolved since AXA Wealth Europe's launch and where your Middle Office team feels stretched.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
