Dear Hiring Manager,

I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience—half of it spent on data strategy, business intelligence, and decision-making systems. This role sits at the intersection of what I do best: translating complex organizational change into working systems, building alignment across technical and non-technical stakeholders, and delivering.

The SID refonte is exactly the kind of mission where depth matters. I've led similar initiatives at major insurers: redesigning actuarial reporting systems, overhauling regulatory data pipelines, and restructuring BI governance across distributed teams. One concrete example: I managed the full lifecycle of a regulatory reporting transformation for a 12-billion-euro insurance portfolio—scoping requirements with Compliance, building the technical blueprint with IT, and driving adoption across 40+ business users. That combination of AMOA discipline, technical fluency, and stakeholder management is what makes these programs work.

I work best as a full-time IC or semi-embedded leader. I'm comfortable holding accountability end-to-end: initiate sprints, unblock dependencies, keep parties moving together, and own delivery. That's different from pure consulting—I actually live inside the problem.

The honest gap: I've operated mostly as an interim or freelance consultant. I'm actively looking to transition back into a permanent role where I can build something longer than a mandate. Your 2026 priority on SID refonte is the kind of multi-quarter program I want to be part of.

Let's talk through what success looks like and whether my background fits the shape of the role.

Best,

Xavier Robitaille
