Re : Principal – Strategic Investments & Corporate Development

Evaluating and structuring cross-border acquisitions, then producing the financial due diligence and Board materials investors need before committing capital: that is the discipline Green PowerHouse applies to its own investments, not just to client mandates.

At CNP, I rebuilt investment accounting under Solvency II for a 350 billion euro portfolio, delivered in 18 months, on schedule. That work covers the core of your due diligence needs: valuing complex financial assets, testing accounting treatment, producing numbers a Board can act on before committing capital.

I also built the regulatory reporting chain feeding the ACPR: SFCR, QRT, ORSA. Same output format as your investment memoranda: structured, deadline-driven, reviewed by executives who use it to decide, not archive it.

Migrating investment platforms (SimCorp Dimension, Clearwater Analytics) across international entities taught me how to run parallel workstreams (finance, IT, actuarial, risk) toward one go-live date. That is the same multi-stakeholder execution your cross-border deals require.

I have not originated or negotiated M&A transactions directly. My due diligence and structuring experience runs through the accounting and regulatory side of investment portfolios, not deal sourcing or negotiation.

I would welcome a call to go through how this translates to your investment pipeline.
