Your Investment Accountant role caught my attention—it's exactly where I add the most value: complex asset accounting, audit readiness, and leading technical delivery through change.

I've spent 25 years in insurance finance, the last decade leading investment accounting and reporting programmes. Most recently, I redesigned month-end close processes for a large mutual insurer holding £8bn+ annuity-backed portfolios—fixed income, structured assets, derivatives. I owned the technical accounting interpretations, challenged quarterly close outputs, and built the controls framework that passed audit scrutiny without material findings. When that insurer moved reporting infrastructure, I ran the accounting sub-ledger implementation and trained the team on the new workflows. That's the hands-on SME role you're describing.

I've also operated at senior stakeholder level in transformation—I know how to translate between actuarial, FP&A, and investment teams without losing the technical edge. My last assignment involved mapping investment accounting GL structures ahead of a wider finance transformation; I documented the current state rigorously and proposed the future control model that won CFO sign-off.

One thing to be direct about: I'm freelance via an umbrella structure (IR35-compliant). You've flagged Inside IR35, which is fine operationally, but you'll want to confirm the engagement terms with your contracting team before we move forward.

I'm based in the Paris area and London is workable for a 12-month contract. Available to start immediately.

Let's talk through the role and what you need from day one.
