Re : Senior Consulting Manager, Business Advisory

Leading finance transformation engagements that combine Solvency II constraints, IFRS 9/17 reporting, and AI-driven process redesign is a specific brief, not a generic advisory mandate. That combination sits at the center of my work.

At a French insurer, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II reporting constraints, covering 350bn€ in assets under management, and delivered the redesigned process in 18 months, on time. I led the end-to-end implementation of SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics, from design through production cutover, aligning finance, actuarial, and IT stakeholders on a single operating model. On the automation side, I built VBA-based journal entry generation to clear legacy suspense accounts during a GL migration, cutting manual reconciliation work and closing a backlog that had accumulated for years. Each of these engagements required the same mix this role asks for: translating regulatory and technical complexity into a workplan executives could act on, then holding the delivery to schedule and quality.

My delivery leadership has run through PMO governance across finance, actuarial, IT, and risk stakeholders, not through direct management of a bench of consulting analysts. If team coaching and staffing on a formal consulting bench matters as much as delivery leadership, that's worth discussing directly.

I'd welcome a call to go through where this fits your current engagements.
