I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience directly aligned with what you need: I've delivered large-scale multi-country transformations, led teams through complex organisational redesigns, and managed stakeholder alignment across matrix structures where competing interests run deep.

At my last two major engagements, I've done exactly this work. I led a regional operating model redesign spanning four countries, managing 15+ people through the transition while reporting to C-suite stakeholders—establishing governance frameworks, KPIs, and change management protocols that stuck. On another mission, I oversaw the closure of a legacy finance centre and offshoring to a new hub, which meant designing processes, retraining staff, and keeping executives calm through the uncertainty. Both delivered on time and within scope.

What sets me apart isn't just project delivery. I understand the insurance and financial services context deeply—regulatory constraints, the need for control rigour, how to translate business cases into reality without losing stakeholder buy-in. I'm comfortable working in matrix environments where you have to navigate competing priorities from Finance, Operations, and Risk teams. I ask hard questions early, establish clear decision rights, and surface escalations before they become crises.

One honest note: I'm currently independent, not employed. If you're looking for someone to step into a permanent regional leadership role with full-time commitment and geographic stability, that's a real conversation—I'd need to understand the longer-term vision and whether this is a genuine 2-year tenure or potential extension. I'm open to the right opportunity; I just want clarity upfront.

I'm based in France, comfortable with hybrid work in Warsaw, and can start quickly. Let's talk about what success looks like for the first 90 days.
