I'm a finance transformation consultant with 25 years in insurance—exactly the technical depth and delivery discipline this role needs.

What makes me relevant here: I've led similar reinsurance integration programs where the real complexity isn't the finance mechanics, it's coordinating across treaty development, regulatory reporting, and operational readiness in a governed environment. I've built the steering committee dashboards, managed the governance approvals, and kept stakeholders aligned when timelines shifted. On a recent quota share restructure, I owned the end-to-end integration plan covering treaty readiness and operational milestones—similar scope to what you're describing.

I bring three things this project needs: one, I can translate between finance, actuarial, IT, and operations without losing precision. Two, I've lived in heavily regulated environments long enough to anticipate what regulators and compliance actually care about versus what slows you down unnecessarily. Three, I deliver outputs that boards can read in five minutes and understand completely.

The honest part: I've worked as an independent consultant and in traditional employed roles. I'm comfortable with both. Your timeline to December 2026 works well for my current portfolio, and the London-remote structure suits how I operate.

I'd value a conversation about what the integration looks like on day one—where the dependencies sit, what's already agreed with counterparties, and where you see the highest execution risk. That'll tell me whether this is where I can add the most value.
