I bring 25 years of insurance and finance delivery experience—the exact operational DNA Munich Re Specialty needs for complex programme execution. This isn't generic PM expertise; it's deep knowledge of how regulatory constraints, actuarial requirements, and IT delivery actually intersect in insurance, combined with the discipline to ship on time and on budget.

I've spent my career managing exactly these dynamics. Most recently, I led a £2.8m finance transformation programme across three European subsidiaries for a major composite insurer—scope creep, vendor management, stakeholder alignment, the full complexity. We delivered on schedule despite a mid-cycle regulatory change that would have derailed most teams. The discipline was simple: clear charters, ruthless risk management, and transparent reporting that kept executive leadership aligned and intervening only when needed.

Before that, I spent years as interim Finance Manager and PMO lead in insurance operations—closing processes, control frameworks, regulatory reporting systems. I've written SOWs, managed purchase orders, tracked actuals in SAP, and forecasted accruals under real pressure. I understand how your internal resources work, where external partners add value, and where they become liability.

Where I'm honest: I've been independent for the past five years, leading my own consulting firm. I'm genuinely open to a senior permanent role where the work justifies it—and complex programme delivery at this scale, under real business pressure, absolutely does. Munich Re's stability and the scope of this role appeal to me more than the independence premium does.
