Re : Senior Insurance Transformation Manager

Leading transformation programmes across underwriting, claims and finance while keeping governance and audit readiness intact is a specific kind of pressure: you're changing the process and proving control over it at the same time. That combination, more than transformation on its own, is where the delivery risk sits.

I've spent 25 years on that exact fault line, entirely in insurance and finance. At CNP, I rebuilt investment accounting production under Solvency II constraints, 350 billion euros in assets under management, delivered in 18 months and on time, with the control framework rebuilt alongside the process rather than bolted on afterward. On a separate engagement, I ran a data migration and interface cutover for a securities sub-ledger, including UAT and clearing the resulting suspense accounts, work that only counts as done when the auditors sign off, not when the system goes live. I've also led SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater Analytics implementations end to end, coaching finance and actuarial teams through new ways of working under real deadline pressure, which maps closely to the stakeholder alignment this role asks for.

Hybrid work is standard practice for me. My most recent engagement with Clearwater ran fully remote, coordinating across time zones and teams without friction.

Happy to walk through any of these in more detail. You can reach me directly or book time at calendly.com/xrobitaille/30min.
