Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to express my interest in the Head of New Business Reporting role at Legal & General's Institutional Retirement business.

With 25 years in insurance and financial services, I bring a combination of actuarial insight, reporting discipline, and delivery leadership that directly matches what you need. My career has centred on exactly this intersection: designing and executing robust new business and regulatory reporting processes, building teams that own end-to-end outcomes, and ensuring Finance, Actuarial, and Operations speak the same language under pressure.

In my recent consulting work, I led the redesign of new business reporting for a major UK life insurer—a £2bn+ book with complex IFRS 17 and Solvency II requirements. I owned the process from data architecture through sign-off, managed a team of four analysts, and established governance frameworks that reduced month-end close time by 30% while improving data quality. I've also sat in the CFO Office on pension risk transfer and bulk annuity reporting, so I understand the specific technical and stakeholder landscape you operate in.

I'm technically grounded (actuarial background, comfortable with models and systems) but equally strong on the softer side: translating requirements, managing competing priorities, and keeping teams aligned when definitions and deadlines shift. I thrive on visibility and accountability.

The main difference between us: I've been independent for the last three years. I'm now genuinely looking to anchor into a substantive leadership role where I can build something durable. This isn't a stepping stone for me—it's the next chapter.

I'd welcome a conversation about how my experience can help L&G strengthen new business reporting governance as your Institutional Retirement business continues to scale.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
