I'm a finance consultant with 25 years in insurance and financial services, and I've spent the last decade solving exactly the problems this role addresses: technical accounting complexity, regulatory change, and audit coordination in multi-jurisdictional environments.

My most relevant work: I led a technical accounting redesign for a mid-cap insurer facing IFRS 17 implementation, preparing detailed technical papers for external auditors, managing the accounting impact of a £45M acquisition, and embedding new controls across statutory reporting. I worked embedded in the CFO office, which means I understand how technical accounting feeds into board-level confidence and regulatory conversations. I'm equally comfortable pulling apart a complex transaction with the deal team or sitting with external auditors to resolve accounting treatment questions.

I know insurance accounting—UK GAAP, IFRS 17, Solvency II implications on reporting. I've built technical accounting frameworks, not just executed them, which matters when standards shift or transactions land unexpectedly. I'm qualified to chartered level and have run similar technical workstreams in hybrid teams across London and remote locations.

One honest note: I'm typically freelance or contract-based rather than permanent. This 12-month fixed-term role aligns perfectly with how I work best—full depth on a defined scope, then move. No culture clash or expectation mismatch there.

I'd welcome a conversation to walk through specific transactions or reporting areas you're navigating. I'm based in the Paris area but London-ready for hybrid work.

Best,

Xavier Robitaille
