With 25 years in insurance and finance transformation, I bring a rare combination: deep technical expertise in operating model redesign, delivery discipline at scale, and genuine fluency across Finance, Operations, IT, and Regulatory teams—exactly what this outsourcing and offshoring programme needs.

I've led similar transitions. At a major insurance group, I redesigned a €200M finance function across three markets, managing the shift from in-house delivery to a mix of offshore captive centres and BPO partners. The outcome: on-time transition, 30% cost reduction, zero regulatory friction, and stakeholder alignment maintained throughout a 18-month execution. That programme ran on the same discipline this role demands—tight governance, clean controls, proactive escalation, and ruthless clarity on dependencies and milestones.

More recently, I've worked on complex sourcing decisions and contract renegotiation where the commercial, operational, and technical pieces had to lock together. I know how to build the frameworks that let senior leadership see real progress, not theatre. I'm comfortable holding space between procurement, vendor teams, and business units when those conversations get tense.

The honest piece: I'm currently independent through Expert Zone Advisory. That's actually a fit for this contract role—I bring senior-level judgment without enterprise overhead, and I move fast. But it means I won't blur lines on governance or risk appetite; I'll be direct about what works and what doesn't.

I'm based in France, comfortable with hybrid Norwich/London/Remote. Happy to discuss timing and logistics.
