I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise directly into complex programme delivery—exactly what Programme Aerodynamics requires. My background isn't generic consulting; it's deep technical knowledge combined with the ability to unblock delivery when strategy, regulation, and operations collide.

In insurance specifically, I've spent two decades navigating the exact tensions your Major Programmes practice tackles: programmes that span multiple years, cut across silos (Finance, Actuariat, IT, Operations, Compliance), and fail because execution falters. I've redesigned finance operating models for mid-cap insurers, led PMO functions on transformation programmes, and built business cases where technical rigour met stakeholder alignment. Most recently, I managed a regulatory reporting overhaul that touched Finance, Risk, and Actuariat—three teams with conflicting incentives and no shared language. We delivered on time because I speak all three.

Your offer emphasizes replacing siloed, linear thinking with multi-disciplinary capability. That's where I add the most value. I don't just run project schedules; I diagnose why programmes stall—usually it's not the plan, it's the culture, the clarity, or the interface between teams. Programme Aerodynamics, from what you've described, needs people who can navigate both the strategy side and the grinding operational reality of insurance transformation.

I'm based in France and work as an independent consultant—proven ability to integrate quickly into teams and deliver under pressure. The Manager role at Deloitte would mark a shift from freelance delivery to a structured platform and team environment, which I'm genuinely seeking. I understand this is different from pure Deloitte background; I see it as complementary.

I'm ready to discuss how my insurance and delivery experience strengthens your Major Programmes capability in Financial Services. Happy to move quickly on a conversation.
