Re : Portfolio Lead (Business Change)

Building a mature, insight-led portfolio function inside a growing Business Change organisation, one that can shift Executive Committee conversations from project status to real trade-off decisions, is a different job from running a PMO. It needs someone who has actually redefined governance under pressure, not just reported against it.

At CNP Assurances, I rebuilt the investment accounting production line under Solvency II constraints for 350 billion euros of assets, delivered in 18 months, on time, with full auditability built into the new process rather than added afterward. That work meant negotiating priorities across Finance, Risk, and IT, exactly the kind of cross-functional trade-off this role asks for. I've also led CDC and UAT cycles for accounting migrations where sequencing and capacity constraints, not technical complexity, were the real bottleneck: getting stakeholders to agree what could pause and what couldn't. My PMP certification (2025) formalised what 25 years of running these pipelines had already taught me about intake, prioritisation, and demand shaping.

I haven't run an enterprise portfolio office using Planview or Clarity specifically, though I've built equivalent reporting discipline with Power BI and structured tracking tools across similar governance needs.

Remote and hybrid delivery is standard practice for me, most recently at Clearwater Analytics, so working across London and distributed teams isn't a friction point. As a contractor who is a non-UK Tax resident, based overseas, IR35 does not apply to me. Happy to discuss how this maps to your current portfolio maturity over a call.
