I bring 25 years of insurance and finance expertise to roles where technical depth, regulatory clarity, and execution discipline matter most. I've spent my entire career at the intersection of finance operations, actuarial constraints, and IT delivery—the exact space where most transformations break down.

On my last two missions, I redesigned the closing process for a €15B insurance group (cut month-end variance reporting from 8 days to 3, eliminated 40% of manual controls) and led PMO governance for a regulatory reporting overhaul across three markets simultaneously. Both required holding together Finance, Actuarial, Compliance, and IT teams with competing priorities. Both had hard deadlines tied to regulatory calendars.

I'm strongest on interim roles with real visibility and pressure—CFO office mandates, programme delivery where clarity wins, business analysis that actually connects strategy to execution. Less interested in long-term staff roles where the work flattens out.

One honest note: I work as an independent consultant through Expert Zone Advisory, so I'm built for contract assignments, not permanent employment. That's actually an advantage for you—you get focused senior capacity without HR overhead, and I deliver faster because there's no organizational friction.

Let's talk. If the role fits the profile, I move quickly.
