Dear Hiring Manager,

I'm applying for the Senior Financial Services Consultant role in Insurance at PwC Belgium because the scope—regulatory transformation, operating model redesign, and client-centric advisory—aligns directly with where I've built my 25-year track record.

My value here is specific. I don't just understand insurance risk and regulatory requirements; I've spent two decades helping insurers implement them. I've redesigned finance operating models across governance, processes, and systems. I've led PMO delivery on programs where regulatory deadlines and complex stakeholder alignment were non-negotiable. Most importantly, I understand what top management of insurance companies actually needs to hear—not just compliance checkboxes, but the hard tradeoffs between cost, risk, and transformation velocity.

Two concrete examples: I recently led the finance function redesign for a mid-market insurer facing Solvency II and reporting complexity—reframed their CFO office structure, cut month-end close by 40%, and embedded actuarial-finance collaboration into governance. Earlier, I worked across Risk, IT, and Operations to scope the operating model impact of a major digital client servicing initiative, presenting findings to the board in terms of implementation risk and organizational readiness, not just technical feasibility.

One honest note: I'm currently independent (Expert Zone Advisory SAS). I'm genuinely open to the right full-time role, and this one signals it. I want to work alongside a team that knows the insurance market deeply and isn't settling for surface-level compliance advice.

I'm available to discuss how my experience translates to your current client base and priorities.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
