I bring 25 years of insurance transformation experience—exactly what Capco needs for this Commercial & Specialty Insurance role. My career has been built delivering operating model redesigns, process modernization, and technology-enabled change in regulated insurance environments. I've spent the last decade as a senior consultant bridging business strategy with delivery execution, which is precisely the skill set your complex transformation programmes require.

I've led comparable initiatives: a major London Market insurer's underwriting process redesign (reducing cycle time by 35% across Property and Liability lines), post-M&A integration work spanning claims and policy administration systems, and multiple digital platform transformations where I translated stakeholder requirements into structured delivery artefacts and managed UAT to benefits realization. I'm comfortable in the technical detail—actuarial constraints, regulatory reporting, system dependencies—but my real strength is making those complexities visible to business leaders and designing solutions that actually work operationally.

The London location and hybrid setup align perfectly with how I work now. I operate as an independent consultant through my own firm, which gives me flexibility to embed fully in client teams during critical delivery phases while maintaining the autonomy to drive structured problem-solving. I'm used to managing across Finance, Actuariat, IT, and Operations—the messy stakeholder landscape where most transformation either succeeds or fails.

One honest note: I come as a senior consultant, not a junior hire. If Capco is looking for someone to grow into the role, I'm probably overqualified. If you need someone who can land running, own workstreams, and bring judgment to ambiguous situations, let's talk.

I'm available to discuss how my track record maps to your current client portfolio.
