

Dear Hiring Manager,

I bring 25 years of specialized experience in insurance and finance—exactly the sector zeb serves. My career has centered on the intersection of risk management, regulatory compliance, and operational delivery, which maps directly to your Finance & Risk practice.

Most relevant: I've spent the last decade designing and implementing credit risk frameworks, rating procedures, and control environments for financial institutions. At one major insurer, I led the rebuild of their entire regulatory reporting and risk governance model across three jurisdictions—tightening controls, aligning IT and Finance, and embedding ESG considerations into the accounting workflow. The result was a 40% reduction in regulatory findings within 18 months and a cleaner, auditable operating model that scaled.

In another engagement, I supported a mid-sized bank through IRB methodology updates and the redesign of their end-to-end credit process—from origination through risk classification to portfolio reporting. I worked across Risk, Finance, and Operations simultaneously, which taught me how to translate between technical risk specialists and business stakeholders without losing precision.

I know the gap: I've been independent consultant and interim manager for the past three years, not sitting in a traditional firm. That's an asset here. I deliver faster because I don't carry overhead thinking, and I'm used to embedding quickly into complex teams—exactly what you need on multi-stakeholder transformation work.

I'm interested in a senior role at zeb where I can contribute deep domain expertise while helping your clients navigate the tension between regulatory rigor, operational efficiency, and business growth. The Frankfurt location works well for me.

Happy to discuss how my background in credit risk, accounting transformation, and bank-wide governance aligns with the specific challenges your clients face.

Best regards,
