Re : Senior Implementation Consultant (Hybrid/Remote)

Leading a SaaS implementation end-to-end, from discovery through go-live, while acting as the client's single trusted point of contact rather than one voice among several on a program team, is a different discipline than running a transformation with an internal team already in place. That ownership, plus the escalation and stakeholder load this role carries, is the kind of mandate I look for.

At Clearwater Analytics, I led the implementation of the investment accounting platform from solution design through configuration to production cutover, working directly with client finance and actuarial teams to turn business requirements into working configuration and reconciled data flows. On a separate assignment, I ran the migration and cutover of an insurer's investment sub-ledger: I wrote the cahier des charges, managed UAT with finance and IT, and built VBA routines to reconstruct opening balances when the data didn't map cleanly, closing the migration without disrupting the monthly close. Both put me at the intersection of Finance, IT, Actuarial and Risk stakeholders, the same kind of workshop-driven, multi-party requirements work this position needs.

I haven't implemented a pure ERP or Accounts Payable package. My systems depth is investment and insurance accounting, SimCorp Dimension and Clearwater, not general ledger or AP software, though the requirements-gathering and configuration discipline transfers directly.

Hybrid work is how I've operated for years. The Clearwater engagement ran largely remote, coordinating client workshops and configuration sessions across time zones without issues. Happy to walk through either engagement in more detail on a call.
