Dear Hiring Manager,

I bring 25 years of insurance and finance experience directly applicable to this role. My background spans business process design, regulatory reporting, and technology-led transformation—exactly the mix NTT DATA needs in a Senior Business Analyst for Guidewire modernization.

I've spent my career translating complex business requirements into executable specifications, which is core to this position. At Expert Zone Advisory, I led process redesigns for major insurers, working across underwriting, claims, and finance to align legacy system constraints with modern operating models. One recent engagement involved mapping core insurance workflows for a platform migration—the same translation work this role demands between business stakeholders and Guidewire implementation teams.

What sets me apart: I don't just document requirements. I've managed PMO governance and delivery rhythm on transformation programs, so I understand both the business architecture side and the operational realities of keeping complex projects on track. I'm comfortable sitting between CFO, IT, and operations teams—translating their competing priorities into coherent solutions.

The honest part: I'm currently independent and would be moving from project-based consulting into a CDI structure. That's intentional on my end—I'm looking for the stability and depth that comes from embedding in a forward-thinking organization like NTT DATA, rather than the rotation of interim assignments.

I'm interested in exploring this further. I'm available to discuss how my insurance domain knowledge and delivery track record fit your growth trajectory in the DACH region.

Best regards,

Xavier Robitaille
