I've spent 25 years building and delivering transformation programs in insurance and finance—exactly the domain Sapiens operates in. What sets me apart is that I've done this at scale: multi-site implementations, matrix stakeholder management, regulatory complexity, and the kind of budget accountability that leaves no room for excuses.

Your Program Director role sits at the intersection of my core strengths. I've led full-cycle software package implementations (ERP, reporting platforms, operational redesigns) where delivery discipline, cost control, and customer alignment were non-negotiable. Most recently, I managed parallel programs across three countries for a top-tier insurer—budget oversight, subcontractor coordination, risk mitigation, the full stack. On-time delivery. Scope locked. Customers satisfied.

I'm also fluent in the insurance operating model: underwriting workflows, actuarial interfaces, regulatory reporting constraints, the friction points that slow most implementations. This isn't theoretical knowledge—it's 25 years of working directly with Finance, Risk, Actuariat, and Operations teams. When something breaks mid-project, I speak their language, not just Project Manager speak.

There's one honest difference worth naming: I've worked as an independent consultant these past few years, not in a traditional hierarchy. The upside is flexibility and proven ability to embed quickly into complex organizations. If you need someone to hit the ground running in Vilnius without onboarding overhead, that's an advantage. If your culture requires deep institutional tenure, that's worth a direct conversation.

I'm genuinely interested in this role because it's a real program—not a checkbox delivery—and because Sapiens is an established player with clients that demand excellence. That's where I do my best work.

Let's talk. I'm available for a call at your convenience.
