Dear SimCorp Hiring Team,

I'm writing to apply for the Senior Implementation Consultant role in Client Reporting. I bring 25 years of hands-on experience in financial services transformation, with deep expertise in reporting, data modelling, and complex implementation delivery—exactly what you need to drive client success.

My background is built on translating client requirements into scalable reporting solutions under tight regulatory and operational constraints. In my recent work, I've led multiple end-to-end implementations of enterprise reporting platforms, managing stakeholder alignment across Finance, Operations, and Risk functions while ensuring delivery quality. I've worked extensively with data architecture, business intelligence tools, and configuration-driven solutions that sit at the intersection of technical precision and client outcomes—the core of what your Client Reporting team delivers.

What sets me apart is how I combine technical depth with accountability for results. I'm comfortable in requirements workshops unpacking real business needs, designing solutions that work, and staying hands-on through testing and deployment. I've managed comparable implementation programmes where attention to detail and clarity under complexity directly drove adoption and client satisfaction.

One honest note: I'm currently independent and focused on selective engagements. This role appeals because it aligns with my sweet spot—advisory depth, client-facing delivery, and the chance to grow expertise in a product-driven environment like SimCorp. I'm genuinely interested in joining a team where curiosity and customer success matter as much as execution.

I'm based in France but available to relocate or work flexibly from London. Happy to discuss how my track record maps to your implementation challenges.
