I'm a consultant with 25 years in insurance and finance—all of it. What Synpulse does in commercial insurance and reinsurance transformation is exactly where I've spent most of that time.

I've led the operational side of complex (re)insurance platform migrations, regulatory reporting redesigns, and multi-stakeholder transformation programs where strategy had to translate into working systems. On a recent engagement, I managed the delivery of a core platform consolidation across three legacy insurers—aligning actuarial requirements, IT architecture, and compliance controls through to go-live. The work required the kind of judgment Synpulse values: moving fast without breaking things, and keeping executive confidence high when the complexity is real.

What I bring is a rare combination. I understand reinsurance structures, underwriting workflows, and the data landscapes that give you headaches. I speak to CFOs and CIOs the same way—no translation layer. I've managed PMOs and AMOA teams on programs with hard deadlines and moving constraints. And I'm genuinely interested in how AI reshapes underwriting and claims intelligence in this space; it's not theoretical for me—I've seen where it actually works.

There's one honest gap: I've worked as an independent consultant and interim executive for the last five years, not in traditional employment. That said, I'm looking for the right structure now—a role with real scope, where I can stay for the long term and build something substantial with a team.

I'd welcome a conversation about how this fits. I'm based in France but relocating or traveling to Zurich works for me.
